Rebekah Marine: 'Bionic' supermodel

Inspired. The amputee supermodel has made her career one of social awareness and self-confidence.

Model Rebekah Marine in Center City / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Rebekah Marine is 28, 5-foot-3 and has one of the most technologically advanced bionic hands in the world. When she is not strutting on fashion runways or posing for high-profile catalogs, she is raising awareness for people with disabilities.

"It took me a long time to build confidence in myself," Marine said of her years growing up in South Jersey with her disability. "Even my parents were worried if I'd adjust well in society."

Marine is a congenital amputee, naturally born without her right forearm. Consequently, her young adulthood would endure professional and social setbacks that would often discourage her.

"People did not understand that being born without my right arm obviously made me more adjusted to working around it," she said. "It was painful applying for jobs as a teen and having to face the difficulty of being prejudged as a liability."

After graduating from college in 2010, Marine, then 22, was encouraged by her peers to consider the "unusual" profession of modeling. She was hesitant, above all reasons.

Quoted

"Who would have thought one of the shallowest industries would ever consider me?" Marine

"Modeling was the last thing I imagined doing," she said jokingly. "Who would have thought one of the shallowest industries would ever consider me?"

After working with a Philadelphia-based photographer that same year and sharing her portfolio online, Marine would later experience the "instant gratification of the Internet."

"Facebook opened the doors. … My first major push came from being found on the Web," she said of being discovered by the founder of Models of Diversity, Angel Sinclair.

The U.K.-based group connects models of all nontraditional and cultural walks of life and easily recruited Marine from the start. Her first major gig: New York Fashion Week last February.

"It was an exciting roller coaster. … I only got a four-day notice," Marine recalls of her "surprising experience." "I was only wearing a chain and huge gems, no bra. … It was for the Antonio Urzi show."

During this time, she also became the face of Touch Bionics, the Livingston, U.K.-based company that created the world's first multi-articulating bionic hand in 2007. Marine recently became one of the first American women to be sponsored by one of their most advanced bionic pieces: the i-limb Quantum.

"It's the Rolls Royce of bionic hands," Marine said, enthused. "I can use up to four different movements to change grips with my muscles and they provide an app on my phone that can allow me to manually change them."

In addition to the bionic hand, Rebekah gets the parts connected to a technological forearm or "socket" at Philly's Advanced Arm Dynamics. Learning to multitask with it has been an "adjustment, to say the very least" for her.

She often shares these stories across the country as one of the ambassadors of the Lucky Fin Project, a nonprofit that mentors those with upper limb differences.

"It brings me joy to be able to mentor and influence young children to feel comfortable in their skin," she said. "It's one of the many ways I feel as though I'm giving back while living such an amazing life."

And her personal life has been even more intriguing. Once feeling rejected from dating and being bullied while in high school, Marine now has now found herself "too busy" to keep up with the countless men who have flooded her Match.com profile.

"I was stunned to see how many men actually responded," Marine said of the time she created the dating site account and put up noticeable pictures with her bionic arm. "My profile joked, 'Yes, I have one arm. No, I can't juggle' and my inbox went crazy."

Lame. Giant rubber duck meant to sail alongside tall ships damaged beyond repair

Soaring masts of old-fashioned seafaring sailboats were seen in the Delaware River this weekend as part of the Tall Ships Philadelphia Camden festival, but a highly anticipated giant rubber duck did not live up to expectations.

The 11-ton, 61-foot-tall giant rubber duck, known as "Mama Duck," sustained a 15-foot tear on Thursday while it was being towed up the Delaware during the Grand Parade of Sails after a tow line tore off the duck, NJ.com reported.

It was pulled out of the river Friday and has been under repair on the Camden side of the river since then.

First, repairs were underway for just the pontoon vessel that carried the giant inflated duck.

Then it was discovered the duck itself had taken on water.

It had to be deflated and cut open to get the water out, reports said.

As of press time, repairs were underway to get the duck fully inflated, but the chance of it getting into the water was reportedly zero. SAM NEWHOUSE

SEPTA to investigate fare beating flap

On video. An officer tried to handcuff a man who was holding a small girl.

A video of SEPTA police attempting to handcuff a man who is holding a small child has prompted an internal affairs investigation, the transit agency's top cop said.

In the video, first posted to Facebook, police are seen asking Ellis Smith, 20, to leave the train car. On the platform, police try to place his hands behind his back. The crowd, which remained peaceful, became agitated because Smith was holding his young daughter at the time.

Quoted

"I'm not going to change how somebody in the public deals with police. I have to deal with how police deal with the public."

Chief Thomas Nestel

The woman that originally posted the video claimed Smith had paid his fare, but was under investigation because he failed to do so for his child. That turned out to be untrue, police said. The child was too young to have to pay a fare.

Outcry over the Facebook video prompted SEPTA police to review surveillance video of the incident: a 16-year veteran of the force can be seen shoving Smith by the throat into a wall as he held the child.

Police say that the officer was afraid he would be disciplined if he backed down and did not arrest Smith.

The incident had the chief taking responsibility.

"If a 16-year officer thinks [he] can't step away from a situation that's spiraling into something that might jeopardize the safety of a child, that's on me," Chief Thomas Nestel said on Friday. "I never want a child's safety to be jeopardized."

Fatality on Regional Rail tracks Sunday after woman hit by train

A woman died Sunday after being hit by a Regional Rail train in Ambler.

The Lansdale-Doylestown train traveling inbound to Center City was near Railroad and Mt. Pleasant avenues when the woman, who was in the track area, was struck around 11 a.m., reports say.

The conductor saw the woman and used the emergency brakes to stop the train but still made contact with the woman.

The woman's age and identity were not available, and neither was why she was standing in the track area.

No passengers aboard the train were hurt; they boarded shuttle buses to finish the trip.

Service was suspended for about three hours after the fatality. Full service resumed around 2:30 p.m. SAM NEWHOUSE

Gas explosions

Terror attack in France at Pennsylvania gas company; decapitated head found

A decapitated head covered in Arabic writing was found at a U.S. gas company factory in France after two assailants rammed a car into the premises, exploding gas containers.

The attack, in which one person was killed and at least one was injured, bore the hallmarks of Islamist militants.

Police sources said the decapitated head was found at the site, along with a flag bearing Islamist inscriptions. One suspect had been arrested and was already known to French intelligence sources, one of the sources said.

If confirmed as an attack, it would be the second major such incident in France this year, coming after Islamist gunmen killed 17 people in attacks on the offices of the Charlie Hebdo satirical weekly and a Jewish food store in January.

"Two individuals deliberately rammed a car into the gas containers to trigger an explosion," the police source said.

The site belonged to Air Products, a Pennsylvania-based industrial gases technology company.

Philly reacts to Supremes' gay marriage decision

Marriage equality. Triumphant, but still more fights ahead, locals say.

The Supreme Court's decision to strike down gay marriage bans imposed by states brought swift — and jubilant — reactions in Philadelphia.

Within hours of the decision on Friday, Visit Philly released a video featuring same-sex couples marrying at prominent Philly landmarks.

In suburban Montgomery County, where local Register of Wills Bruce Hanes' decision to issue marriage licenses in the face of a state ban sparked a major court fight, local leaders who backed Hanes were ecstatic.

"Love is the law!" said Mongtomery County Commissioner Josh Shapiro. "Today's ruling marks a great step forward for our democracy and our gay friends and family."

U.S. Congressman Chaka Fattah called the decision a monumental step forward in the country's pursuit of equal rights.

"Today, I join with millions across our great nation in celebrating this landmark decision to affirm marriage equality in the United States of America. Now, LGBTQ individuals will have the right to marry whomever they choose, wherever they choose," Fattah said in a statement.

Democratic Mayoral nominee Jim Kenney, who as a councilman led the fight for several pro-LGBT bills, called the day a celebration.

And while the court's decision is likely the last major hurdle toward marriage equality, there remain some roadblocks.

In a piece in Politico magazine, Widener law professor John Culhane notes the ruling "doesn't mean that states won't try to make it more difficult for same sex couples either directly or indirectly."

Culhane, who lives in Philadelphia, said conservative states could continue to explore laws like one recently passed in North Carolina that allows county officials the right to deny marriage licenses for religious reasons. There may also be further litigation on the rights of people who provide services to weddings — such as caterers and florists — to refuse to participate in same-sex celebrations.

Second fugitive shot, nabbed

Captured. David Sweat, one of the two men to escape from an upstate prison earlier this month, has been caught alive.

David Sweat, one of two New York state inmates who escaped from prison three weeks ago, was shot by police near the Canadian border and rushed to a local hospital on Sunday, two days after his accomplice was killed, authorities said.

His capture was the dramatic climax of a massive manhunt for Sweat and his fellow inmate Richard Matt, who were discovered missing from the Clinton Correctional Facility in Dannemora, New York, on June 6. Some 1,300 members of law enforcement took part in the search through the forests and bogs of northern New York.

Sweat, 35, was shot and taken into custody in the town of Constable, New York, 23 miles north of Duane, where his accomplice was shot and killed on Friday, New York State Police said in a statement. Constable is just 5 miles south of the Canadian border.

Sergeant Jay Cook of the New York State Police spotted "a suspicious man walking down a roadway" at about 3:20 p.m. According to officials, he called to and engaged the man, recognized him as Sweat and ran after him. As Sweat ran close to the treeline, Cook shot him twice in the torso.

Sweat was taken into custody alive, and then taken to a local hospital for treatment.

Authorities reported him in stable condition at a news conference Sunday evening, and said he would be transported to a trauma center.

"I think a lot of people are going to rest easier tonight," said Jessica Randall, 38, of Malone, who was shopping with her husband when she saw a convoy of police vehicles speed by.

Capturing the suspect alive would enable New York state prison authorities to learn more about how the pair managed to break out and use that information to tighten security.

In their audacious break-out, the pair cut through cell walls, climbed along a catwalk, shimmied through a steam pipe and emerged from a manhole outside prison walls, authorities said. REUTERS

Dead

First escapee shot Friday

Richard Matt, 49, was fatally shot Friday near Malone, about 27 miles northwest of the prison, by a member of the border patrol tactical unit.

Autopsy results showed he was shot three times in the head and died of severe skull fractures and brain injuries.

Matt was convicted in the 1997 torture, murder and dismemberment of his boss. After he apparently fired a shot at a passing motorist on Friday, officers spotted and confronted him outside a cabin.

He was shot and killed after he refused to comply with orders to put down a shotgun he was holding, police said.

The Buffalo News has reported that Matt may have been intoxicated, citing the owner of a burglarized cabin who said he had found empty liquor bottles.

France attack suspect admits killing

French police escort Yassin Salhi as they leave his flat in Saint-Priest. The suspected Islamist who attempted to blow up a French chemical plant on Friday has admitted killing his manager beforehand, a source close to the investigation said on Sunday, as police linked the suspect to a militant now in Syria. Salhi, 35, told detectives he had killed Hervé Cornara in a parking area before arriving at the plant in Saint Quentin-Fallavier, 20 miles south of Lyon, where he tried in vain to cause a major explosion. Examination of one of Salhi's mobile phones revealed that he had taken a picture of himself with the severed head and sent the image to a Canadian phone number. REUTERS

1 SpaceX rocket explodes after Florida launch

An unmanned Space Exploration Technologies rocket exploded about two minutes after liftoff from Florida on Sunday, destroying a cargo ship bound for the International Space Station in the latest in a string of mishaps in supplying the orbiting outpost.

The 208-foot-tall Falcon 9 rocket, built and flown by the company known as SpaceX that is owned by technology entrepreneur Elon Musk, had previously made 18 successful launches since its 2010 debut. Those included six cargo runs for NASA under a 15-flight contract worth more than $2 billion.

The accident soon after liftoff from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station was the second successive botched mission to resupply the space station. A Russian Progress cargo ship failed to reach the outpost in April following a problem with its Soyuz launcher. REUTERS

2 Boy Scout killed in flooding at New Mexico ranch

A Boy Scout was killed when a flash flood triggered by heavy rains swept through a canyon on a New Mexico ranch where he was camping, authorities said on Sunday.

The scout was discovered missing on Saturday morning and later discovered dead, according to a statement issued by the Philmont Scout Ranch.

A flash flood swept through a canyon on the ranch at about 4:30 a.m. local time where a group of 12 scouts and leaders was camping, according to local television station KOB-TV.

3 One injured when shots fired at San Francisco's gay pride festival

A spectator was shot in the arm after a dispute at San Francisco's annual gay pride festival escalated into gunfire on Saturday, police said.

Police responded to reports of gunshots in the United Nations Plaza area of downtown San Francisco as the first day of the city's two-day gay pride celebration was winding down.

"The incident is believed to have started when several groups of men, unrelated to the PRIDE event, got in a verbal argument near or inside the venue," the San Francisco Police Department said. REUTERS

4 Missouri stunt pilot killed in air show crash

A pilot was killed when his biplane crashed while he was performing stunts in front of a crowd at a Missouri air show on Saturday, police said on Sunday.

Steven O'Berg, 50, crashed shortly before 2 p.m. on Saturday in Cameron, Missouri according to a news release from Cameron Police Chief Rick Bashor.

O'Berg flew in a Pitts S-28 biplane capable of vertical maneuvers, and featuring a loud exhaust and a propeller tone that was popular with audiences, according to a description on the Cameron Airshow website. O'Berg lived in Smithville, Missouri, near Cameron, Bashor said. REUTERS

5 Volkswagen to launch budget cars in 2018

Germany's Volkswagen plans to launch a family of low-cost budget cars in China and possibly elsewhere starting in 2018, its chief executive said in a newspaper interview on Sunday.

"We will bring a budget-car family to market in 2018, with an SUV, saloon and hatchback," Martin Winterkorn told Bild am Sonntag newspaper.

Europe's largest automaker had for years been pondering a budget car but difficulties in hitting internal cost targets had thwarted approval of the project. REUTERS

Web fund helping Singaporean baby get surgery in Boston

Lifesavers.
Indiegogo Life and GIVEasia campaigns have raised more than $350,000 of the needed $1.3 million for a rare procedure.

Mother and baby / PROVIDED

The struggle began for baby Yujia the day she was born, one month early in a Singaporean hospital.

Her kidney was small and her heart pocked with holes. A blood clot found in her brain signaled she might later suffer seizures. Most pressing, though, a birth defect meant the infant's esophagus did not connect properly with her stomach, a condition called Esophageal Atresia, which in its various forms impacts about 1 in 4,000 newborns, according to the National Library of Medicine.

After nearly two years of hospital stays and surgeries, 21-month-old Yujia is still not well, said her mom Jamie Yun. Seeking the safest and most effective treatment, Yun said she needs to bring Yujia to the world-renowned EA program at Boston Children's Hospital. The price tag: $1.3 million.

When a Boston doctor delivered the news of how much surgery and a six-month stay would cost, Yun said, "My heart sank. … I gave up on the spot."

Quoted

"We never thought the response would be that overwhelming." Yun

So three weeks ago, Yun asked the world for help, launching a crowdfunding campaign on Indiegogo Life, which so far has raised close to $150,000. Another fundraiser on a Singapore-based site called GIVEasia has raised an additional $215,000.

Six weeks of fundraising remain, and it appears the Yun family is approaching its goal.

"We never thought the response would be that overwhelming," Yun said. "I just wanted to share our story to as many people as we could."

Yun is not alone in asking the Internet for help paying medical bills.

Fundraisers for medical treatments are among the most popular on Indiegogo Life — the site's branch that focuses on fundraising for personal needs or causes — said spokeswoman Elena Ginebreda-Frendel.

"Medical fundraisers do extremely well," Ginebreda-Frendel said. "The most successful campaigns include an authentic, personal story to explain the impact the funds will have. When people have something personal to connect with, they are more likely to donate."

Taiwan probes water park fire as tally of injured in hundreds

Safety. Authorities have banned the use of the powder until the investigation is completed.

The number of party revelers injured in a fire at a Taiwan water park was put at 498 on Sunday as authorities began investigating the cause, suspected to be a sudden explosion of a colored powder thrown on those attending the party.

Six foreigners and seven visitors from Hong Kong, mainland China and Macau were among those injured after about 1,000 people dancing at Saturday's event were sprayed with the powder, as a special feature of a festival also held in previous years.

The figure released late Sunday by local authorities was lower than an earlier estimate of 519 injured due to patients being transferred between hospitals and being double-counted, a government official said.

The blaze, which broke out at around 8.30 p.m. at the Formosa Fun Coast water park on the outskirts of the capital, Taipei, is suspected to have been caused by an explosion of the colored powder, local government official Lin Chieh-yu told Reuters.

"It remains under investigation as to what made the powder explode," he said.

"The next few days will be a critical time for the injured," Taiwan Premier Mao Chi-kuo told reporters. All of the 498 injured were still being treated in 43 hospitals across the island, according to the latest figures provided by the New Taipei City government.

In the immediate aftermath of the explosion, rescuers treated hundreds of people, most of them aged between 20 and 30, who wore wet swimsuits and lay on inflatable plastic doughnuts.

Quoted

"Her whole life is ruined."

Sobbed the father of Chu Li, an 18-year-old girl with burns on 80 percent of her body.

A video posted online by Apple Daily showed dancers in front of the stage engulfed in clouds of colored powder a moment before a fireball erupted, followed by pockets of flame, triggering panic and screams.

"There was blood and people were on fire," one injured man said.

No deaths have yet been reported, but victims suffered burns on limbs and torsos, with some passing out from the pain while others had burned clothes stuck to their skin, media reports and pictures showed.

Soldiers, army vehicles and medical services joined the rescue effort, while hospitals in four municipal precincts, along with Taipei, are treating sufferers.

The amusement park has been closed temporarily, it said on its website on Sunday. REUTERS

1 Taylor Swift and Calvin Harris officially a power couple

Watch the throne, Jay Z. Or more specifically, watch as you and Beyonce have to evacuate it to make room for Taylor Swift and Calvin Harris, who took the top spot as a couple on Forbes magazine's Celebrity 100 list, even though they've only been together for a few months. Swift and Harris' combined annual incomes total an impressive $146 million. But Jay and Bey, bumped to No. 2, can at least console themselves with their combined $110.5 million annual take. Who needs silly lists, anyway?

2 Brad and Angelina take tea with William and Kate

Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie got a special treat while in the U.K. that would make any anglophile seethe with jealousy. The couple had tea with Prince William and Kate Middleton, according to Us Weekly. Not too shabby. Or is it that the royals were lucky enough to have tea with Brangelina? It could go either way. The royals "met with Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie at Kensington Palace on Friday afternoon," a palace spokesman says. "They discussed their shared interest in combating the illegal wildlife trade." Way to kill the mood, guys. Did Kate at least get her "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" DVD signed?

Contest announcement. And the winner of #BeLikeRihanna is...

A close-up look at the mood board that won Camila Fernanda Aguilera the competition. / MWN

Metro may be your favorite local city paper, but we are part of a global brand with editions in cities all over the world. Readers from across the globe entered our #BeLikeRihanna contest, creating mood boards in hopes that theirs would be creative enough to win an all-expenses-paid trip to see RiRi in concert.

The results are finally in, and the winner is — drumroll — Camila Fernanda Aguilera from Santiago, Chile. The 26-year-old graphic designer created a mood board depicting Rihanna as a "strong Caribbean queen."

"Rihanna is a very resilient woman fighting for her dreams," Aguilera tells us. This will be the first time Aguilera will see her role model in the flesh. She says she's excited to travel to the U.S. and experience the concert with other Rihanna fans who admire the singer just as much as she does. Congratulations! METRO

Keith McCurdy is based in New York City's Lower East Side. / MWN

Bang Bang. Celebrity tattoo artist Keith McCurdy talks being friends with Rihanna and how she changed his life.

Keith McCurdy has left his indelible mark on a lot of A-listers — Miley Cyrus, Cara Delevingne, Justin Bieber and Katy Perry are just a few. But the tattoo artist known as Bang Bang — a nickname he owes to a pair of revolvers on his neck — first inked his way to fame with Rihanna, when he was just 19. McCurdy, whose tattoo parlor is based in New York City's Lower East Side, chats candidly about life behind the needle.

How did you start working with Rihanna?
I started tattooing Rihanna when she was 18. I was 19 — it was quite a long time ago. I asked her about it recently, and her story is different from mine, but the way that I remember it was she had to come in to my tattoo shop to get a nipple piercing. She had asked a piercer friend of mine — his name is Joe Snake — who was the best tattoo artist around, and he told her it was me. I met her, we clicked really well, and I tattooed her the next day. I also tattooed her best friend Melissa [Forde] the same day. I've really never stopped tattooing them. We are tight.

Which one of her tattoos is the most special to you?
I think it's the first one, the Sanskrit prayer I did on her hip. … Doing that tattoo on her, becoming her friend and continuing to tattoo her over the years really changed my life.

What do you guys talk about when you tattoo her?
We're friends so we talk about a lot of things, none of which are what the [press] talks about. We never talk about anything like that. It's more like where we want to go clubbing!

Have you made Rihanna scream in pain?
She is a thug! I have put Rihanna through extreme pain. I've even made her cry before, but she never quit; she never passed out. Tattoos hurt, you know!

Have you ever been asked to copy one of Rihanna's tattoos?
Yes, I get asked to copy her tattoos all the time, but I won't do it. I'll happily do something with a similar style, but I won't do the exact same one. I don't work at McDonald's; I'm not making burgers. I'm making tattoos, and I [want] them to be unique to you.

One more thing

Can you tell us something about Rihanna that the general public doesn't already know?

She is very observant. Even if she is drinking, goofing off, laughing or partying, she pays close attention to people. She is very selective with the people she lets into her life.

PHS pop-ups become 'Bitter Homes and Gardens'

Rebecca Kanach designed the unusual costumes for "Bitter Homes." / PLATE 3

Cabaret. The Bearded Ladies ask, "If plants could speak, what would they sing?"

Bearded Ladies John Jarboe, Mary Tuomanen and Kristen Bailey are performing at the PHS pop-up beer gardens. / PLATE 3

March's Philadelphia Flower Show provided the ideal setting for a photo shoot for the Bearded Ladies' garden-themed summer cabaret, but the costumes hastily created by designer Rebecca Kanach proved to be a little too beautiful for the irreverent company's aesthetic.

"They made the actors look a bit like garden fairies," recalls Sally Ollove, the Beards' associate artistic director. "We wanted to rough them up a little bit so we gave them cigarettes and snow boots, and that tension was really compelling for us."

That clash proved to be instrumental to the development of "Bitter Homes and Gardens: A Botanical Hoe-down," which the Bearded Ladies will present over the next few weeks in the two Pennsylvania Horticultural Society pop-up beer gardens. The show was inspired by "The Intelligent Plant," a New Yorker article written by Michael Pollan in late 2013. The thrust of the piece was the debate in scientific circles over whether plant life could be considered intelligent. As Ollove explains, "We became interested in the idea of, 'If plants could speak, what would they sing?' That launched the idea for the cabaret, and then it seemed natural — sorry, once we started working on this show, we learned that puns abound — to envision the piece in the outdoors."

Less intuitively, the music for the show began to lean in a country and folk direction, resulting in a performance that uses songs by Bob Dylan and Faith Hill along with original compositions by resident composer Heath Allen. Written by founder and artistic director John Jarboe and returning Beard Mary Tuomanen and directed by Ollove, the show takes on the environment, the role of science in society and genetically modified foods from the plants' perspective. Spoiler alert: They don't seem too happy with humanity.

"The idea of projecting ourselves into the perspective of plants was intriguing," Ollove says. "We discovered pretty early it was going to be very easy for us to steer into the beauty of nature, but we were more interested in the jagged edges and wildness and unpredictability. That translated into ennui, anger, complaints and the idea of protest."

Those themes tie in neatly with the Bearded Ladies' annual Bastille Day Cabaret at Eastern State Penitentiary, which lands in the middle of the run of "Bitter Homes" as the show moves between its two locations. No word on what the flowers think of tossing Tastykakes from the walls of an abandoned prison.

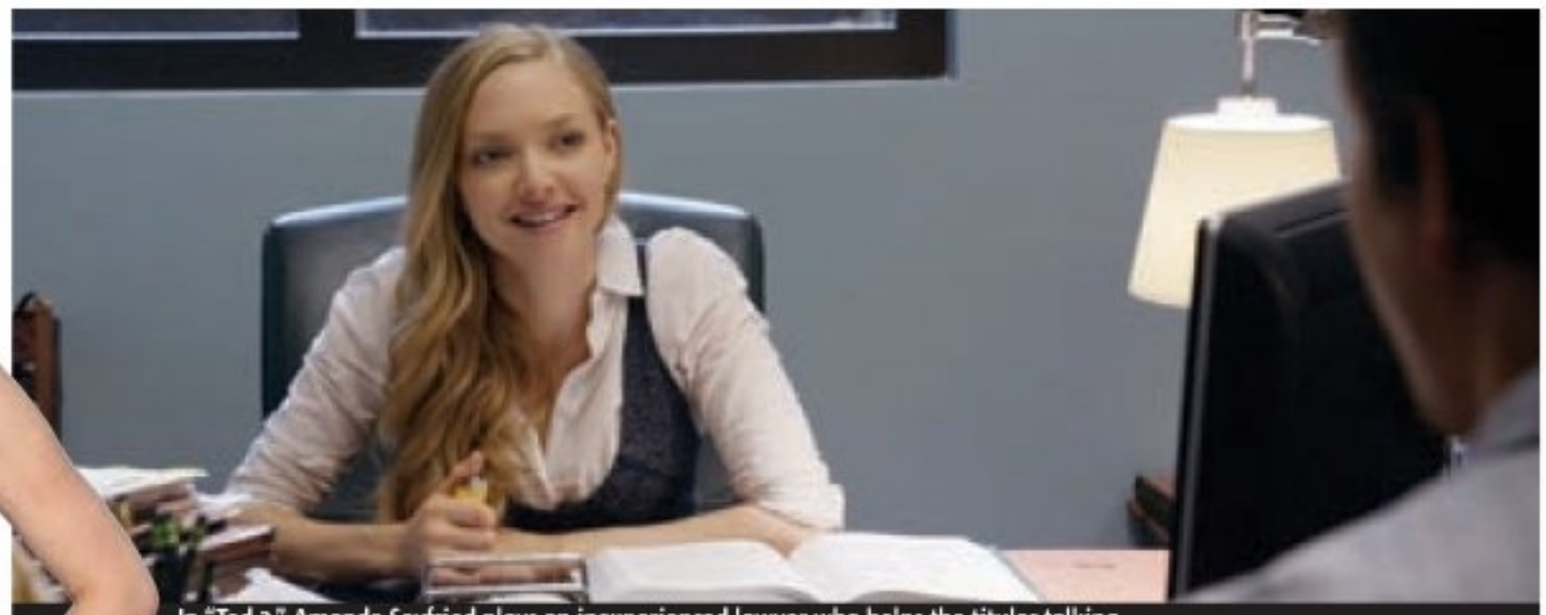
Amanda Seyfried is not a jerk

Interview. The "Ted 2" actress is annoyed when people are amazed she's nice.

GETTY IMAGES



In "Ted 2," Amanda Seyfried plays an inexperienced lawyer who helps the titular talking bear (voiced by Seth MacFarlane) achieve legal personhood. / UNIVERSAL PICTURES

When we speak to Amanda Seyfried, she's in London, forced to briefly abandon her off-Broadway show — Neil LaBute's "The Way We Get By" — right before it entered its final week. (Its run has since ended.) "I am not happy about playing hooky, I'm telling you," she says. Instead, she's talking about "Ted 2," her second film with Seth MacFarlane after last year's "A Million Ways to Die in the West." Both mark a return to comedy for a serious actress who got her big break in "Mean Girls," though the genre is still another welcome challenge.

"The Way We Get By" is your first play. Even veteran stage actors talk about the physical grind of doing stage.
I couldn't do a longer run than this. Broadway commitments are four months; I just don't know if I could do that. If I do a play, it's going to be a month or two, at most, otherwise I'm going to start hating it. You don't want to start resenting going to work every day. It's been two months, and it's been perfect.

Speaking of challenges, it seems like improvising with Seth MacFarlane and Mark Wahlberg might be difficult. Did you have to do much riffing?
Not for me, because I ad-lib but I don't improvise. I'm not great at improv-ing. My brain doesn't work that fast. Mark and Seth are really good at it, and they have a great dynamic. They can riff off each other, and it's so fun to watch. But I can't do that. I'm terrible at it.

This is your second film with Seth MacFarlane. What was your first meeting like?
He was a little shy at first. I'm very outspoken. I'm a little unfiltered, and I say things to get a reaction, sometimes, when I'm nervous. I definitely said one thing, and his ears perked up, and he said, "What?" I can't really say what it was. I always, unconsciously or consciously, try to disarm people a little bit. I feel like I'm always fighting a stereotype about actresses or people my age or if I'm trying to get a job, which is why we first met. I was trying to play against the stereotype. I try to fight against people thinking they know who I am or have some kind of idea of me.

What do people tend to assume about you?
I notice that people just assume I'm going to be an a—hole.

Really, an a—hole?
Because I'm famous. Do you know how many f—ing flight attendants have said to me — I'm sure this happens all the time to many people — they say, "You're actually really nice! I can't believe how nice you are!" Their expectations are just so low sometimes. Bummer.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

One more thing

Eye of the beholder

Both in "A Million Ways to Die in the West" and "Ted 2," MacFarlane throws in jokes about your eyes. How do you react to him doing it twice now?
Yeah, they're pretty big. He's safe with me; he can make fun of me. He can basically say anything. I can't take myself too seriously. He wanted to make a Gollum joke, so why not? I guess it makes sense. [ed. There's a joke in "Ted 2" in which Seyfried's character is compared with someone who looks like Gollum.] I can say, the day we shot the Gollum stuff, that's my best friend dressed as Gollum. She's tiny like me.

Intimate weddings allow bigger splurges

The Budget Savvy Bride

JESSICA LEHRY BISHOP

THEBUDGETSAVVYBRIDE.COM

HELPING COUPLES PLAN BEAUTIFUL WEDDINGS WITHOUT BREAKING THE BANK.

Jessica Bishop is a budget wedding expert and founder of TheBudgetSavvy Bride.com, where she shares tips, ideas and advice to help couples save money on their weddings. Jessica lives in NYC.

By keeping their wedding small, Patrice and Chad were able to splurge on what was most important to them, including a Napa Valley venue. / ALL PHOTOS MEGAN CLOUSE

You've probably heard it before, but it bears repeating: Your guest count is one of the biggest cost-adding factors when it comes to your wedding budget. Although many of the weddings we feature on TheBudgetSavvyBride.com feature guest counts over 150 people, the ones that seem to evoke a more luxurious vibe are the intimate weddings.

Your overall cost increases exponentially for each guest you add to your invite list. Think about it this way: For every guest, you'll need an extra chair, place setting, meal, slice of cake, invitation, program, place card and wedding favor. For every eight to 10 additional guests, you can add another table, linen, centerpiece, row of seats at the ceremony, another tier of the wedding cake and you may even need a bigger venue space to accommodate larger numbers.

When you keep your guest list intimate, it allows you to focus on the people who matter most to you such as your family and closest friends. By keeping the guest list small, you can also choose to splurge a bit more in certain areas, treating your guests to a more luxurious event. Not only will your planning process be less complicated logistically, but it also gives you more freedom in spending on your top priorities for the event.

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

Winery wedding bells

Take, for example, the Napa Valley wedding of Patrice and Chad, which was recently featured on our site. Their wedding welcomed 18 total attendants including the bride and groom, and the couple spent less than $10,000. The couple opted to get married in a simple ceremony at the courthouse so that they could host their guests with a memorable reception.

Their biggest expenditures included wedding photography and the venue, Flora Springs Winery in Napa Valley, California. The venue cost accounted for 50 percent of their total budget, which included a fantastic seated dinner as well as a tour of the winery property and wine tasting for all the guests. This offered all in attendance a unique experience while also celebrating the happy couple and is something they are sure to remember for years to come.

DIY details

To make up for their high-priority splurges, the couple did some DIY projects with the help of their loved ones to keep their spending under budget. The bride's sister baked the couple's naked wedding cake, and Patrice and Chad created custom noisemakers and gold-painted animals to pair with their guests' place cards. The bride and groom even printed their invitations and stationery at home using supplies they picked up at a craft store for a total cost of under $30.

Patrice and Chad also incorporated their Hawaiian heritage into their day by folding 1001 origami paper cranes to use as decor, which is believed to bring happiness and good fortune to the bride and groom. I'd say, based on their budget-savvy wedding planning skills, good fortune in their married life is a sure thing.

Other ways Urschel keeps his brain sharp

"Chess is good. Reading, though not directly math related, helps in general and helps with your intellectual curiosity, which ties back into mathematics. I would also recommend playing quantitative-related games where you have to think — adding games that involve thought and not just pure randomness."

HOW TO GET AHEAD

(M)Athlete

Ravens lineman and numbers genius John Urschel tells us why everyone should love math.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

John Urschel is best known as an offensive lineman for the Baltimore Ravens. But he's also a mathematics whiz who has published academic papers (his latest: "A Cascadic Multigrid Algorithm for Computing the Fiedler Vector of Graph Laplacians"!!!), taught college calculus (at alma mater Penn State) and presented research to the NSA.

In addition to teaching during the off-season, Urschel is now partnering with new startup Persado, figuring out how to use math to generate compelling ad copy. (So, he can add "Don Draper 2.0" to his résumé, too.)

We caught up with the OG mathlete and asked him why it's important for football players to know their times tables.

So, does math make you a better football player? Is there a connection between math and football?

Mainly the competitiveness. That strong competitive drive — "I'm going to beat you" — is the same when it comes to tackling a math problem — like, "I am going to solve this and get at this and be victorious."

Beyond that, the better you are at thinking quickly and efficiently, the better of a football player you're going to be. One of the most important components of being an athlete is being able to see something and make [the right] split-second decision. That requires great intelligence and fast-twitch brain muscles, which mathematics trains.

How did you fall in love with math?

Ever since I was a little kid, I always had this question of "why." Why is the world like this? Why are things like this? I always had this desire to understand the unknown, and math, man, it was this beautiful thing. I loved that mathematics was this elegant thing that we have constructed. It's this man-made thing that is used to describe this beautiful, complex world we live in.

You're involved with lots of STEM and education initiatives. Why is it so important for kids to get into math?

No matter what job you get into — whether it's writing, working at a PR firm or playing professional football — mathematics will serve you well. You will face problems throughout your life — problems that the great majority of the time you have never faced before. And all of a sudden, you'll need to take your experiences, the skills you have learned and the tools you have acquired and somehow apply them to this new thing.

This is what mathematics trains you for. And that's really what people face in their lives day in and day out. Yes, mathematical equations and factoring and the Pythagorean theorem — these are things you should know. But really, what math is, is training your brain how to think.

You are a football player and a mathematician. Most people can grasp the "football player" part, but what exactly does a "mathematician" do?

Being a mathematician, in essence, is just applying mathematics to the world we live in. And that's it. … It doesn't have to be a professor; it doesn't have to be in academia. It can be in government, working for the NSA; it can be in the private sector, such as with a company like Persado, which has mathematicians. I believe the 21st century — this is the century of the mathematician.

"I have this terrible balance in my life. The problem is I love football and I do football, and I love math and I do math. But then I don't want to do anything else, and I don't do anything else. But I like my life, so I guess it's not that bad!"

Chocoholics rejoice: You can now learn to make your own chocolate from scratch. PROVIDED

New York's Institute of Culinary Education now lets you major in chocolate

New York's Institute of Culinary Education is opening the nation's first educational bean-to-bar chocolate lab, and it looks delicious.

The lab is just one of the delectable features in ICE's new, 74,000-square-foot Lower Manhattan facility, which also includes a "modernist" culinary technology lab and an indoor hydroponic farm. But the school felt it was important to include a small-batch artisanal chocolate-making facility due to the explosion of bean-to-bar operations in the U.S. during the past 10 years.

"I once read an article where a chocolatier stated, 'The most important step in making chocolate is every step,'" says Michael Laiskonis, ICE's creative director, who is at the helm of the chocolate lab. "I'm excited to show pastry chefs who aren't chocolate makers how quantitative aspects of the process — roasting time and temperature, milling particle size, etc. — can affect the end flavor and to explore the best applications of every type of chocolate."

Do they take applications for taste testers, too?

Letters to the editor

With gay marriage decision, SCOTUS states the obvious

It's a testament to the laziness of people that so many are cheering SCOTUS' decision on gay marriage, when even the Supreme Court justices said it was, um, actually legalized in 1868 when Equal Protection was made federal law in the 14th Amendment. A hundred and five years to get the government to obey its own laws? If you call that "progress," then you need to raise your standards a bit.
SHAUNA ERLBAUM, VIA EMAIL

With its decision to support the legality of marriage equality, the Supreme Court deserves our gratitude for stating the obvious.
DAVID TERHUNE, VIA EMAIL

Necessary unions

If everyone reading the unconstitutional definition of marriage, and are reading it in these pages, had only two male or two female parents, none of you would ever have been be born. What a loss to humanity.

Weekend's answer

BRATS AND BUNTING

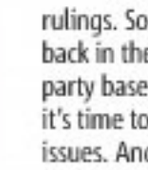
Tourists are rolling in, the charcoal is lighting up and bottle rockets are being smuggled over from Virginia. Yep, the Fourth of July is looming in D.C. The White House has extra reason to celebrate as the fireworks burst over Independence Avenue, while at the GOP barbecue — meh. Light the fuse, here are three things to watch this week.

GRILL MASTER: Barack Obama hasn't had this much sizzle since his first inauguration. The Supreme Court fired up the coals with positive rulings on Obamacare and same-sex marriages; a deal with Republicans has kept Mr. Obama's Pacific trade deal from falling into the ashes; the Confederate flag is being scorched; and a spectacular speech in Charleston has him looking like the Bobby Flay of Pennsylvania Avenue. Expect the White House to keep the heat on high as the president meets Tea Party attacks on the federal Export-Import Bank this week. Without Congressional backing, it sinks, and supporters say it will take a lot of jobs with it.

The Foreman forecast

TOM FOREMAN

TOM FOREMAN PREDICTS THIS WEEK IN POLITICS. HE IS A CNN CORRESPONDENT AND AUTHOR OF THE UPCOMING BOOK "MY YEAR OF RUNNING DANGEROUSLY: A DAD, A DAUGHTER, AND A RIDICULOUS PLAN."



WARM BEER: All the victories for liberals are landing like lawn darts in the conservative picnic. Watch for the 2016 Republican presidential contenders to keep scrambling for the right response to those huge SCOTUS rulings. Some want to push back in the name of the party base, while others say it's time to move on to other issues. And btw, this week, Chris Christie is expected to join the parade of GOP candidates.

WE NEED ICE!: Sen. Bernie Sanders will be battling claims that he's soft on gun control. Sanders, rising in the polls among Democratic presidential hopefuls, is being attacked by both Hillary Clinton and Martin O'Malley. They know the Vermonter has a lot of pro-gun constituents, but also that his progressive fans might cool if they see him playing horseshoes with the gun rights crowd.

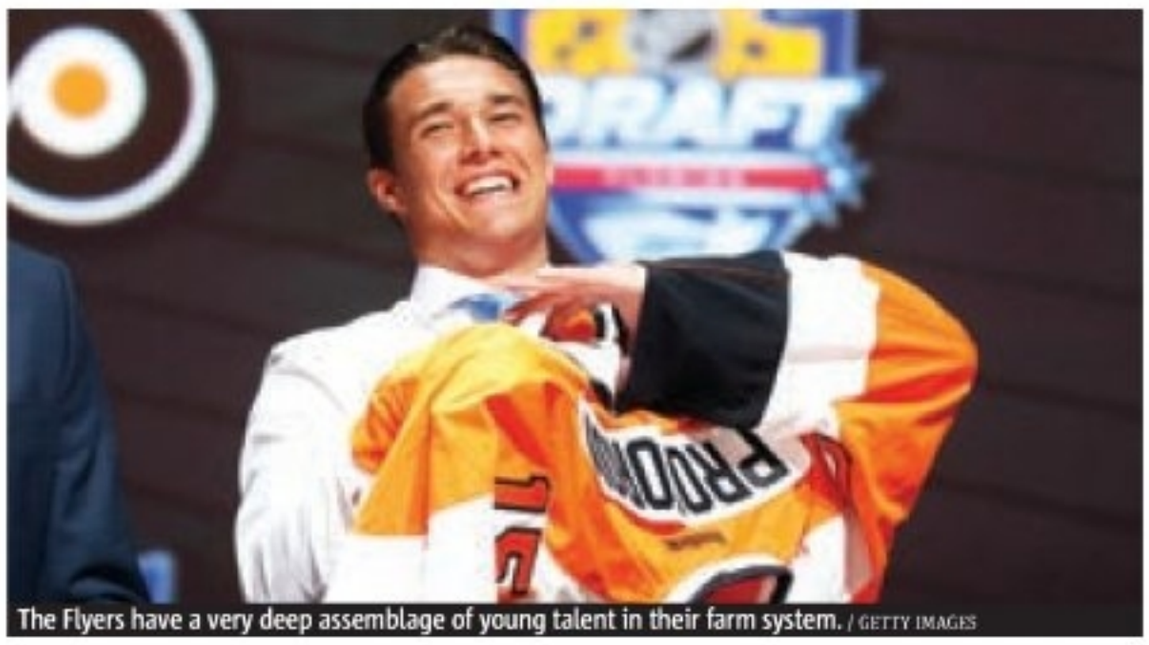
Latest on Hamels

Hamels is open to all teams

Cole Hamels laughed when reporters asked him about a report that he rejected a potential trade to the Astros. "I haven't been approached," Hamels said this weekend. "People are looking at it like I'm holding the dice, but I'm not. Ruben [Amaro] and Pat [Gillick] are."

Flyers confident top pick Provorov is the real deal

NHL. Philly has a stockpile of potent defensive prospects.



The Flyers have a very deep assemblage of young talent in their farm system. / GETTY IMAGES

While trying to figure out who was the last homegrown defenseman that the Flyers have developed that had a long-standing impact during a recent interview with Metro, Chris Therien hit the pause button.

It was as if he knew the answer but almost didn't want to admit it. Finally, after a few seconds, he inevitably uttered with a chuckle, "Me."

The sad part is he's right.

The 1990 third-round draft pick of the Flyers — and the team's current TV color analyst — spent 11 of his 13 years in the league patrolling the blue line for the organization.

However, the Flyers think they took a big step in trying to end the 25-year drought. General manager Ron Hextall used the team's No. 7 pick overall in the NHL Entry Draft on Friday to select Russian defenseman Ivan Provorov.

"Ivan was a guy we coveted," Hextall said to reporters at the draft. "He was a guy we targeted."

Fast, physical and strong on offense and defense, Provorov was ranked as one of the top two defensemen in the draft. The 18-year-old could even start his NHL career this fall and has all the tools to become a coveted No. 1 or No. 2 defenseman.

He is not alone, though. The Flyers, who have grabbed a defenseman in the first round for three straight years, have stockpiled as many as four other highly touted players on the blueline.

Travis Sanheim, last year's first-round pick, is their top-rated prospect, while Sam Morin (first round in 2013), Shayne Gostisbehere and Robert Hagg all have the potential as well to develop into elite D-men. With the addition of Provorov, the Flyers likely have one of the best groups of young defensemen in the league.

Near impossible to obtain in trades or free agency, the only way to get a No. 1 defenseman these days is to draft and develop one. The Flyers feel that is what they did this weekend and have been trying to do over the last three years.

"I know they have really good young defensemen," Provorov told reporters. "I'm a competitive guy and it will be fun competing against those guys [to make the Flyers in the future]."

New overtime rules

NHL approves big changes for upcoming season

The NHL approved a couple of bold changes at last week's Board of Governors meeting that will be implemented this coming season.

The biggest one was to overtime, where teams will now skate 3-on-3 for five minutes. The league had played 4-on-4 in OT since the 1999-2000 season. The goal is to have more games that are tied after regulation decided in overtime and reduce the number of games that go to a shootout.

The other notable change was the introduction of the coach's challenge. Much like in football and now baseball, NHL coaches will be able to ask for a challenge on offside calls and plays involving goalie interference.

Best pro team in Philly: AFL's Soul

AFL. The Philly Soul have the best record in the AFL and have already clinched a playoff berth.

A 12-2 record is something Chip Kelly and the Philadelphia Eagles dream of for the upcoming season. For Clint Dolezel and the Philadelphia Soul, that dream is a reality.

In his third season at the helm of Philadelphia's current winning franchise, Dolezel has his squad rolling. Friday night the Soul put together a second-half offensive onslaught the Tampa Bay Storm could not handle, leading to a 64-42 victory.

In the fast-paced, explosive and high-scoring sport of arena football, the Soul have dominated the current season and clinched a playoff spot after Friday night's victory.

"It's really nice to clinch the playoffs this early," Dolezel said after the game, "but that's the last thing on our minds. We're trying to win the division next."

The offensive numbers are staggering to see and are an offensive coordinator's fantasy.

After Friday night's performance, quarterback Dan Raudabaugh extended his passing total to 3,985 yards. The fourth-year starter out of Miami University has a quarterback rating of 123.08 on the year and has his team cruising to its fourth straight playoff appearance.

Hidden under the spotlight of the four major sports teams in the city, many of those in the City of Brotherly love are unaware that the Soul have been the most successful.

In the past three seasons, the Soul have had the highest winning percentage in town out of all the Philly professional sports teams at .701 (47-20). The Flyers come in second at .535.

Dolezel has the determination and passion you would want to find in a head coach. Formerly the offensive coordinator, Dolezel guides his team to the best record in the league after a 9-9 2014 season.

The team is owned by former Eagles quarterback Ron Jaworski and it is giving playoff fever to a city anxious to witness a championship season, something that's been missing since the Phillies won the 2008 World Series.

The head coach can't ignore the possibility that 2015 might be another title year, but his soul and focus remain intact to the game-by-game focal point.

"We still have several tough games left," Dolezel said, "we're going to enjoy tonight but then after bye week we're going to come back and get back out here."
